

Slaughter Connects Catherine Lennon with Mortgage Lender Fannie Mae to Resolve Tragic Situation

WASHINGTON – Congresswoman Louise Slaughter (NY-28) today intervened in the hopes of allowing a Rochester woman and her family of 11 to return to their home following an eviction by mortgage lender Fannie Mae.

Catherine Lennon of Rochester, called Slaughter's office last week asking for the Congresswoman's help so she could stay in her home with her family. It was Slaughter who first alerted Fannie Mae to Lennon's situation.

Yesterday, Lennon was evicted from her Ravenwood Ave. home.

Today Slaughter spoke to officials at Fannie Mae and put Lennon in direct contact with officials who could help resolve her case. Lennon's case is currently being re-reviewed by high level officials at Fannie Mae.

"I'm very happy to assist Ms. Lennon and her family of 11 so that they will be able to return to their home," said Slaughter. "Seeing the outpouring of support from the community is particularly moving. Every day we hear about home foreclosures reported with faceless statistics but it is Ms. Lennon's tenacity to protect her home and the family she loves that we should remember. I will continue to wish her and her family the very best."
